Many young girls wonder what their place in the world is. They ask what their place in society is and why they often feel inferior. In numerous underdeveloped countries such as Nigeria, women are still trying to discover their voices. This work is a celebration of African women; The aim is to celebrate the unsung Heroines of Nigeria, more specifically to show gratitude to the women in my life who inspire me today. This work is also my way of paying homage to the Chibouk girls that were kidnapped as a result of the failures of the Nigerian government and society when it comes to female rights and education.
